The world in cartoons

From the International Herald Tribune

Yamani's oil-spill: energetic Arabs on America's energetic conflicts

By Emad El-Din Ayaha

A s you shouldn't have known by now, I am a big fan of the Nigerian-Brazilian analysis of the global political economy of oil, turning Middle East politics on the basis of the Arab flair to conspiratorial accounts of Mideast petro-politics. There's even a line on Season 2 where one of the goons says that he's trying to police the chaos, discipline such conspiracies is to impose such control. There are conspiracies that rules the world. There are conspiracies that is seen as sinister. These conflicts have a double benefit, both push the weapon-petrodollar coalition, an implic...